SAINT OF THE WEEK

ST HEDWIG OF SILESIA (c.1174-15th October 1243)

Hedwig was born in Andechs, Bavaria, to a prominent noble family in the Holy Roman Empire. Her family were well-connected in the royalty and power-centres of Europe, and they were very pious. Her sister, Gertrude, married the King of Hungary, making Hedwig the aunt of the future St Elizabeth of Hungary. Hedwig was married to the Duke of Silesia (a region in modern-day Poland), and she helped broker peace between him and other rival dukes. After her husband died, she joined a convent as a lay sister. Tragedy struck when her son was killed during the Mongol Invasion, fragmenting Poland. Hedwig set up a monastery on the site of the battle. Hedwig became renowned for her support of the unfortunate. She supported the poor, widows and orphans, founding hospitals for the sick and lepers. She would even give her time to teach the poor how to pray, encouraging them in the practice of the faith. She died on the 15th October 1243.
