SAINT OF THE WEEK

ST CHAD OF MERCIA (c.620-2nd March 672 A.D.)

The brother of St Cedd, not much is recorded of Chad's early life. He seems to have been from a Northumbrian Christian noble family. He was a student of St Aidan of Lindisfarne, so grew up in the Celtic Christian tradition. He first comes on to the scene helping his brother Cedd establish the monastery of Lastingham in Yorkshire. The monastic life was ascetic, but not enclosed. He studied the scriptures but was also involved in missionary activity to the locals. After the death of his brother, Chad succeeded him as Abbot of Lastingham. St Cedd had been a key player at the Synod of Whitby, that sought unity between Celtic and Roman Christian traditions. Chad helped implement this unified English Christian identity. He became the Bishop of York, but this was disputed, so he humbly stood down. In view of his great humility he was appointed Bishop to Mercia, founding the cathedral in Lichfield. He worked hard in the Midlands, dying on 2nd March 672.
