SAINT OF THE WEEK

ST JOHN DE BRÉBEUF (1593-16th March 1649 A.D.)

Born in Normandy, France, Brébeuf joined the Society of Jesus when he was 24, and became a teacher at the Jesuit College in Rouen. He had an aptitude for languages and so was selected for the mission in New France. He arrived in Quebec in 1625 and began learning the local Native American languages. The mission wasn't very successful and Brébeuf was recalled to France in 1629. However, in 1633, he returned to try again. He settled among a tribe called the Wendat. Unbeknownst to the missionaries, contact with Europeans brought disease, especially smallpox, which devastated the native population. Brébeuf preached the Gospel in words and deeds, but conversions were slow due to the difficulties in communication so he focused on learning the native customs. In 1649, the mission was raided by other Native Americans and he was captured and tortured by having boiling water poured on his head as a mock baptism. Finally, on 16th March 1649, Brébeuf was scalped and roasted.
